

NATIVE AMERICAN IROQUOIS

Written by: Emily Smith

WHERE DID THEY LIVE?

The Native Americans lived in north eastern New York State around big body's of water and small rivers.

SHELTER

The Native Americans lived in long houses that were 180-200 feet long. Archeologists found a long house that was 400 feet long. They made them out of logs, bark, twigs and mud.

CLOTHING

The Native Americans clothing was made out of deer and bear skins. The male Iroquois hunted the deer and bears to get the meat. The girls used the skin to make the clothing.

TOOLS AND HUNTING WEAPONS

The Native Americans used spears to stab the fish out of the water. They also threw the spears at deer, bears and rabbit. The spears were made out of deer and bear bones.

FOOD

The Native Americans ate fruits and grains that they grew in their gardens such as corn, squash and beans. They also ate many edible animals such as deer, bear and also rabbits.

CONCLUSION

My favorite part of learning this unit is I got to learn how they survived, how they used their weapons and what they ate.
