The sheer number of students calling the library home to work quietly during their Activity period was phenomenal. A respectful atmosphere was maintained the entire year. "The Ocean" area (white noise of ocean waves in one of the classroom areas) was provided for the quietest work, with tables and computers for others, and all were able to co-exist with the many classes taught during the same periods.

New laptops!

The library received a new mobile cart in the spring, with thirty touchscreen, Windows 10 laptops. It was an instant hit with the students.

Professional Development

Professional journals for the district teaching staff made their return to the William H. Davis Professional collection this year.

Students at Work

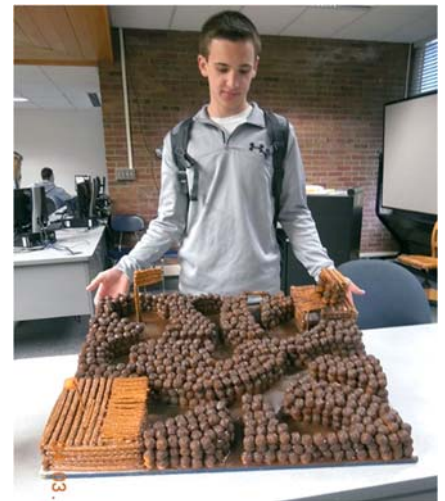

This marked the first year in which, not only did students continue to do their own photo copying, but they began sending print jobs from their computers to the Konica copier. The ability to send multiple documents and articles to the cloud and release them all at once relieved lines at the two Laser Jet printers in the library. The students especially enjoyed the convenient stapling of their documents by the Konica.

Stand-up student

Working a crime scene in the library conference room for the new Forensics class.

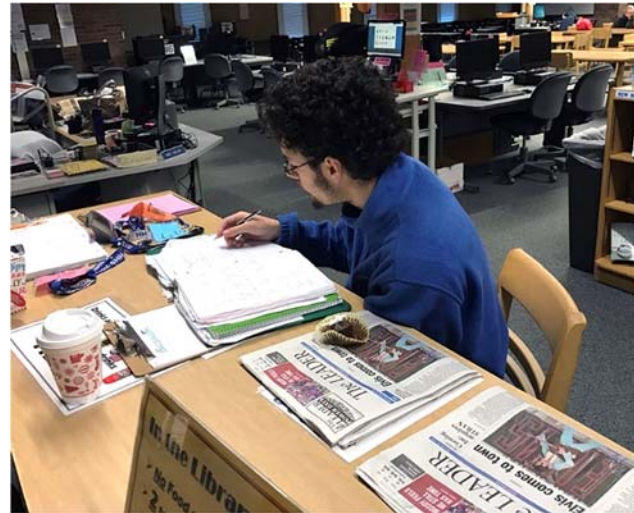

World War I trenches modeled with Cheetos Cheeseball from a Trench Art assignment.

Betsy and Julia: Do-everything wonders

Special volunteers provided hours of work to keep the library running.

Henry and the morning newspapers

The art of shelving

Olivia at work

A lot of fun was brought into the library, by students and staff alike.

Raider pride and joy

Ms. Bratz and her French IV students.

Mr. Combs brought smiles on Pajama Day.

*Chess was an Activity Period staple with dedicated players.
Mr. K. oversees a match.*

Mrs. Donaldson made us happy.
